1. Good Neighbours International

(General Consultative status granted 1996)

Good Neighbours International (GNI) was founded in 1991, aiming to contribute to forming a sound world community where people live together through loving and helping one another as one big world family, with respect for equal human rights and freedom through carrying out relief and rehabilitation and humanitarian development programs. In addition to the organization's ministry performances in its partnership countries, many individual members have contributed in their professional and private capacities to the work of the United Nations.

Good Neighbours has implemented ministry programmes in field countries on the basis of needs analysis and performance evaluation, through interactions and reporting so that ministry performances could be achieved efficiently and effectively. During the last quadrennial period from 2000 to 2003, it is notable that Good Neighbours has been involved in war-related relief programs in Pakistan and Afghanistan since November 2001 and in Iraq since April 2003. Though we started those programs in the earlier stages as emergency relief, they have been developed into rehabilitation and long-term developmental projects and are being smoothly operated in Afghanistan and Iraq.

On a national basis Good Neighbours International keeps close relationship and collaboration with international NGOs in consultative status such as International Council on Social Welfare(ICSW), International Association for Volunteer Effort(IAVE), Rotary Club, Save the Children, World Vision, Food for the Hungry, etc.

2. Sulabh International

Granted Special Consultative Status in 1996

Aims and Objectives:

1. Liberation and rehabilitation of scavengers from sub-human practices of cleaning human excreta of others from bucket privies and their social up-gradation.

- 2. Conversion of bucket privies into two-pit pour flushes toilets and construction of new unit where it is required.
- 3. Construction, operation and maintenance of public toilets in slums and at public places on pay & use basis.
- 4. Implementation of the technology for complete recycling and reuse of human excreta from public toilets through biogas generation, followed by treatment of effluent with simple and convenient method.
- 5. Provide awareness, motivation and education to slum dwellers and other people in sanitation, health & hygiene and environment.
- 6. Provide vocational training to liberated scavengers in different market oriented trades to improve their quality of life.
- 7. Provide R & D, consultancy, training in the field of sanitation, waste management environment etc.

Ways to achieve objectives:

In order to liberate scavengers (whose number is still about 7 million in India), Sulabh is engaged since 1970, in the conversion of bucket privies into two-pit pour flush toilets (popularly known in India as Sulabh Toilet). The technology is simple, economically affordable, socially acceptable and technically appropriate. It does not require scavengers to clean human wastes, as there are two-pits, used alternately, where while one is in use the other one, filled earlier with excreta, undergoes rest period of two years during which excreta gets converted into semi-solid, odourless, pathogen free manure suitable to be collected by beneficiaries and can be used as manure for agriculture. Sulabh started door-to-door awareness programme regarding health hazards due to open defectation and persuaded people to get Sulabh toilets constructed. Sulabh has demonstrated different models of toilets of different sizes, made up of different locally available materials and consequently different costs -that range from US $ 20 to US $ 1,000- suitable for all economic groups of people. So far Sulabh has implemented 1.2 million such house-hold units, of which about 150,000 units were constructed during the reporting period 2000 - 2003.

For the improvement of community health & sanitation in slums, Sulabh continued its efforts to implement public toilets on pay and use basis in slums and at public places. So far it has constructed 6,000 such units spread in all States of India of which more than 800 public toilets were constructed during the reporting period 2000-2003. The system of "pay & use" has helped reduction of financial burden on municipality / local body to maintain sanitation, as Sulabh takes maintenance guarantee of the system (that it implements) for not less than 30 years. Development and implementation of sustainable technologies for waste management are the important achievements of Sulabh for the reporting period. Sulabh Duckweed technology for waste water treatment has received acceptance in rural as well as urban areas as there is good economic return from pisciculture. Similarly technology for complete recycling and reuse of human excreta from public toilets, has gained momentum in recent years, as it is economically best option for on-site treatment of wastes.

For rehabilitation of scavengers and their wards Sulabh is providing free vocational training through its Vocational Training Centre in different trades. Wards of scavengers are being imparted school education in Sulabh English Medium School, that too free of any charge.

WASH campaign - Sulabh started WASH campaign in India last year Initially Sulabh trained 750 women volunteers from 12 urban slums in Delhi They were imparted training in various aspects of health & hygiene and safe drinking water These volunteers acting as lead persons undertook door to door canvassing on safe drinking water, health & hygiene So far more than 12,000 persons, mostly women have been trained Sulabh has printed on a massive scale posters, pamphlets, banners with attractive messages on health, sanitation and hygiene, and distributed them in different slums and other areas Sulabh is going to form a National Committee of Sanitation in which there will be members of all the political parties of India which are roughly about 42 in number. Through this Committee Sulabh will try to sensitize the Sanitation Movement in India. The involvement of freedom fighters, religious leaders, doctors, students and teachers are on the anvil. It will not be out of place to mention that Sulabh has already persuaded parliamentarians and legislators to earmark for sanitation work some amount of special development fund that they receive. Sulabh has also involved persons viz. school teachers and beneficiaries in various walks of life and with different interests with which parliamentarians too are associated. It has tried convergence between commonality of constituency and interests of parliamentarians and those whom they represent. Best on its performance Sulabh has got Global 500 Roll of Honour 2003 from UNEP and Scroll of Honour Award 2003 from UN Habitat.

The Stay Alive program is designed to reach children ages 8-W, and empower them to make wise choices before they reach the age of sexual activity. Slay A h e helps children focus on the goal of "living a long, loving life."

The Stay Alive HIV/AIDS prevention education program has received tremendous support and endorsement by governments throughout Africa.
