Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1, held its twenty-seventh session from 1 to 12 May 2017. The review of Brazil was held at the 9th meeting, on 5 May 2017. The delegation of Brazil was headed by Luislinda Dias de Valois Santos, Minister of Human Rights. At its 14th meeting, held on 9 May 2017, the Working Group adopted the report on Brazil.
2. On 13 February 2017, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Brazil: Botswana, El Salvador and Kyrgyzstan.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to Council resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Brazil:
  - (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/27/BRA/1);
  - (b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/27/BRA/2);
  - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/27/BRA/3).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Belgium, Czechia, Germany, Mexico, the Netherlands, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland was transmitted to Brazil through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the universal periodic review.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The delegation of the State under review engaged in the twenty-seventh session of the Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review in a spirit of constructive dialogue. It considered the universal periodic review a dynamic exercise, and reaffirmed its commitment to working closely with government and non-governmental partners to fully implement the recommendations.
6. It stated that Brazil was going through a challenging period that imposed short-term sacrifices and that required structural reforms, which were vital to generate jobs and ensure equal opportunities for all, in full respect for human rights. In view of the gravity of the economic crisis inherited by the Government, Brazil had approved a constitutional amendment aimed at balancing public finances while preserving Brazilian social programmes. Without that adjustment, persistent fiscal imbalances could lead to a vicious cycle of low growth, high inflation and chronic unemployment, undermining the ability of the State to finance public policies that benefited the poor and vulnerable groups.
7. Faced with rapid changes in the demographic profile of Brazilian society, the Government sought to guarantee the long-term sustainability of the social security system. In doing so, it was committed to respecting acquired rights and ensuring transitional rules. The labour reform, in turn, was aimed at promoting investment and job creation. These were reforms that were being debated extensively and democratically in the National Congress.
8. Concerning adequate housing, the My House, My Life programme had been expanded. It was aimed at reducing the country's housing deficit by financing low-income families' purchase of their first property. The properties financed under the programme complied with sanitation, safety and accessibility guidelines.

9. Brazil considered that popular participation was one of the pillars of democracy and the rule of law. That was the logic underlying the tradition of thematic conferences promoting participation in public policies. Brazil had held its twelfth National Conference on Human Rights in 2016, in addition to a series of other sectoral conferences.

10. Following a voluntary commitment made in the first cycle of the universal periodic review, the use of social indicators had allowed better monitoring and evaluation of public policies, becoming a concrete tool for the progressive realization of human rights, through the National System of Human Rights Indicators. In addition, the Government remained committed to the implementation of the third National Human Rights Plan, in force since 2009. In 2013, the National Observatory for Human Rights had been launched. It made information about the implementation of the National Human Rights Plan available for monitoring, by both government agencies and civil society, through an online platform.

11. Brazil reiterated its commitment at the highest level to fighting discrimination of any kind. In that regard, 20 per cent of vacancies in civil service examinations at the federal level were reserved for Afro-Brazilians. In universities and technical schools, 50 per cent of vacancies were allocated to students from public secondary schools, with the distribution of vacancies between Afro-Brazilians and indigenous people based on the proportion of such groups in each community. The Living Youth programme included preventive actions that promoted a sense of belonging and autonomy, besides countering violence. An affirmative action programme concerning members of the judiciary had also been proposed.

12. The delegation reiterated its condemnation of violence against indigenous peoples. It emphasized that the Integrated Plan for the Implementation of the National Policy for the Territorial and Environmental Management of Indigenous Lands sought to ensure indigenous occupation and management of indigenous peoples' lands. There were 462 indigenous lands already demarcated, besides other ongoing demarcation processes. The Government of Brazil was also committed to conducting consultations, in accordance with the International Labour Organization (ILO) Indigenous and Tribal Peoples Convention, 1989 (No. 169). The São Luiz hydroelectric project on the Tapajós river was a case in point.

13. With regard to public safety and the justice system, in addition to strengthening long-term preventive measures, such as education, income distribution and income-generation programmes, Brazil was committed to ensuring that the fight against crime was carried out with respect for human rights, as reflected in the National Security Plan. Brazil had invested in training police forces, guaranteeing access to justice, strengthening public defenders, and fighting impunity in cases of excessive use of force. It was also worth mentioning initiatives by both the Public Prosecutor's Office and the police forces, aimed at prioritizing investigation as opposed to repression.

14. In addition to cooperating with the states of Brazil to expand prison vacancies as a way to fight overcrowding, the Federal Government had encouraged alternative penalties for minor offences, as a way of reducing the incarceration rates. In addition, special task forces, in coordination with the Public Defender's Office, had been established to assess the situation of prisoners willing to return to family life. The Custody Hearings Promotion Programme had led to a 50 per cent reduction in provisional detentions.

15. In 2013, in compliance with the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, Brazil had established the National System to Prevent and Fight Torture, which comprised an independent body composed of 11 experts, with legal competence to inspect places of detention. The relevant committee had already carried out unannounced visits to more than 50 places of detention in 11 states.

16. The Government of Brazil had regulated the Programme for the Protection of Human Rights Defenders, which was currently handling about 400 cases. In addition to immediate protection of their physical integrity, the programme sought to mobilize public agencies to investigate and prevent violations. When the states did not have a framework for protection, the Federal Government included defenders in its programme.

17. The National Truth Commission had acknowledged deaths and enforced disappearances perpetrated in the past, having located 33 bodies, besides identifying State actors as perpetrators of violations. Its report presented 29 recommendations, focused mainly on research and on redress actions, as well as on non-recurrence.

18. The 2014 Fédération internationale de football association (FIFA) World Cup and the 2016 Olympic Games and Paralympic Games had been held in Brazil without incidents and had left a significant legacy. Specific policies to protect the rights of children and adolescents and to fight racism in the context of such events had been put in place.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

19. During the interactive dialogue, 103 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

20. Montenegro asked for information on policies to eliminate violence against children, and on legislation to prohibit discrimination and violence based on sexual orientation and gender identity.

21. Morocco welcomed the national policies of Brazil on primary care, child malnutrition and mortality, gender equality in employment, and participation of women in public affairs.

22. Mozambique congratulated Brazil on the implementation of social programmes to reduce extreme poverty and on progress in the prevention of racial discrimination and in minorities' status.

23. Myanmar welcomed the efforts of Brazil to advance the rights of persons with disabilities, including the National Plan on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities in 2011.

24. Namibia applauded Brazil for its national programmes aimed at improving the living standards of its vulnerable populations, such as Afro-Brazilians and indigenous peoples.

25. Nepal appreciated the progress made by Brazil on reduction of poverty, promotion of social equality, the health sector, combating violence against women and the fight against modern slavery.

26. The Netherlands regretted to note a lack of progress in corporate social responsibility, especially in the Amazon regions, and continuing attacks against journalists and human rights defenders.

27. Nicaragua welcomed the progress by Brazil on human rights since its last universal periodic review.

28. Norway commended efforts in reducing poverty, combating slave labour and enhancing women's rights and the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender persons, but expressed concern at the situation of indigenous peoples.

29. Pakistan commended the development of the National System of Human Rights Indicators, the promotion of racial equality, access to justice and programmes on education, health and nutrition.

30. Paraguay welcomed the commitment by Brazil to the international human rights system and the ratification of a significant number of human rights instruments.

31. Peru underlined the progress made by Brazil in the fight against poverty, and affirmative action for an increased presence of Afro-Brazilians in the public administration.

32. The Philippines lauded poverty alleviation programmes, achievements in gender equality and the increased presence of women in the labour market.

33. Poland acknowledged the accomplishments of Brazil in reducing poverty, in improving access to education, and in health care, and efforts to eradicate slave and child labour.
34. Portugal noted that in 2015 Brazil had organized a seminar on human rights for the lusophone countries. Portugal welcomed the National System of Human Rights Indicators, and efforts to improve the situation of persons with disabilities.
35. The Republic of Korea noted that Brazil had met most of the health targets in the Millennium Development Goals and had strengthened the mandate of its National Human Rights Council.
36. The Republic of Moldova encouraged Brazil to continue efforts in advancing indigenous peoples' rights, to protect indigenous lands and heritage and to fight discrimination and violence against indigenous peoples.
37. The Russian Federation praised the achievements of Brazil in fighting gender, racial, ethnic and other forms of discrimination, but noted that indigenous peoples remained among the most vulnerable groups in the population.
38. While noting the progress made in combating racial discrimination and violence against women, Rwanda encouraged Brazil to enhance those efforts.
39. Senegal expressed satisfaction in regard to the reduction of extreme poverty, programmes to access housing, and the national plan of action for women for 2013-2015.
40. Serbia encouraged Brazil to continue combating torture and ill-treatment, reducing overcrowding in penitentiary institutions and giving greater emphasis to foster-care programmes for minors.
41. Sierra Leone noted the national plans on education, on combating sexual violence against children and on sustainable development. It encouraged Brazil to further protect the rights of persons of African descent and the rights of its indigenous communities.
42. Singapore commended Brazil for progress in reducing poverty, in promoting gender equality and empowering women and in promoting sustainable development.
43. Slovakia noted legislative changes to tackle the excessive use of force by law enforcement officials and the National Programme for the Protection of Human Rights Defenders.
44. Slovenia noted the establishment of institutions with specialized services for victims of domestic violence, and the adoption of the National Policy on Alternative Punishment.
45. South Africa noted the efforts made by Brazil to reduce poverty and to promote equality through affirmative action for Afro-Brazilians.
46. Spain noted the efforts made by Brazil to reduce poverty and social inequality and to promote the rights of persons with disabilities. It noted the persistence of violence against women.
47. Sri Lanka noted the progress made in combating extreme poverty and promoting social equality, improving access to health care, reducing infant mortality and promoting gender equality.
48. The State of Palestine noted the efforts made by Brazil to protect the rights of persons with disabilities and of human rights defenders. It encouraged Brazil to ensure that the National Human Rights Council was in compliance with the principles relating to the status of national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights (the Paris Principles).
49. The Sudan commended Brazil for its efforts in reducing poverty and infant mortality, promoting the rights of persons with disabilities and ensuring access to adequate housing.
50. Sweden noted the overcrowding in prisons, the large number of child brides and an increase in violence against lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons.

51. Switzerland noted delays in land demarcation processes and challenges faced by human rights defenders. It remained concerned about the large number of illegal abortions.
52. In response to some of the questions received, the delegation stated that Brazil was investing in initiatives such as University for All (PROUNI), the Student Finance Fund (FIES), the National High School Examination (ENEM) and the National Common Curriculum Base (BNCC).
53. Brazil had adopted, in February 2017, a secondary school educational reform, after much debate and wide discussion. It represented the culmination of a national effort to overcome low indicators related to exclusion, dropout and grade repetition rates.
54. The Government had improved the More Doctors programme to the benefit of users of the public health system. In addition to bringing physicians to regions where there was a shortage of medical professionals, the programme provided for the construction, renovation and expansion of basic health units, and training of health-care professionals. The “Stork Network” had been expanded to promote actions focused on disadvantaged populations, including indigenous peoples and Afro-Brazilian quilombola communities.
55. In relation to the Zika epidemic, Brazil had intensified measures to combat the Aedes aegypti mosquito. It had expanded the access to diagnosis and treatment, the rehabilitation of newborns, and the psychosocial support for families, among other measures.
56. Brazil considered that inclusive social policies, the fight against hunger and the reduction of inequalities were central to ensuring the realization of human rights. The combination of policies of income transfer, such as the Family Stipend, the consistent rise in the minimum wage, and family agriculture had contributed to significantly improving the social conditions of the population, since the last review.
57. Thailand noted the efforts made by Brazil to improve human rights mechanisms, to combat human trafficking and to eliminate child labour and sexual exploitation of children. It noted inadequate day-care facilities for pregnant women in prisons.
58. Timor-Leste noted the adoption of the national plans on education, and on combating sexual violence against children and human trafficking.
59. Togo noted the ratification of many international human rights instruments and the efforts that Brazil had made to reduce extreme poverty and to help the poorest families.
60. Tunisia noted the establishment of the National Human Rights Council and progress achieved in reducing poverty, developing social security and the health-care system and protecting the rights of persons with disabilities.
61. Turkey commended progress in several areas, but noted a high rate of poverty, shortcomings in the access to safe drinking water and sanitation, and deficiencies in the prison system.
62. Uganda highlighted the efforts made by Brazil to strengthen various human rights institutions.
63. Ukraine noted the efforts of Brazil in the area of poverty reduction, education and health care, and the launching of the National System of Human Rights Indicators.
64. The United Arab Emirates noted the efforts made by Brazil to promote and protect human rights, particularly the rights of women.
65. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland noted progress in several areas, including torture prevention and recognition of same-sex marriage. It urged Brazil to strengthen protections for journalists and human rights defenders.
66. The United States of America noted the efforts of Brazil in several areas, but remained concerned about reports of unlawful killings, violence against environmental activists, inhumane prison conditions, prolonged pretrial detention, and delays of trials.

67. Uruguay noted the efforts made by Brazil to improve birth registration and encouraged Brazil to continue those efforts. It expressed concern about proposed constitutional amendments seeking to reduce the age of criminal responsibility.
68. Uzbekistan noted the efforts made by Brazil to reduce poverty, promote social equality and combat violence against women, and the adoption of the human rights indicators.
69. The Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela was concerned at the human rights situation in Brazil, in particular at widespread corruption, increasing discrimination against indigenous people and people of African descent, and sexual harassment against children.
70. Albania commended steps taken by Brazil to design policies to fight poverty and help families in need. It invited Brazil to further strengthen its human rights mechanisms.
71. Algeria welcomed progress made by Brazil to improve the rights of children, women, indigenous people and people of African descent, and encouraged it to continue its efforts.
72. Angola recognized that Brazil had established an observatory system for follow-up to the recommendations of the international human rights mechanisms. It commended Brazil for its programmes aimed at reducing poverty, such as Bolsa Família.
73. Argentina welcomed the adoption of the law criminalizing femicide, and efforts to combat discrimination against lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons.
74. Armenia welcomed measures taken to reduce poverty, protect children living in the street, promote the right to truth and reconciliation, and combat modern slavery and child labour.
75. Australia was concerned that economic recession created a challenging environment for human rights in Brazil. It welcomed the appointment of family violence judges in every state of Brazil.
76. Austria commended Brazil for the adoption of the law on femicide. It encouraged Brazil to implement the recommendations of the Special Rapporteur on the rights of indigenous peoples.
77. Azerbaijan welcomed legislative measures taken by Brazil to enhance access to justice, and progress made in combating modern slavery and human trafficking.
78. The Bahamas welcomed progress made by Brazil to reduce poverty, implement development strategies, and combat modern slavery and inequalities among men and women in the labour market.
79. Bahrain noted with satisfaction the number of recommendations accepted by Brazil, especially those aimed at eliminating racial discrimination and at income inequality.
80. Bangladesh noted the efforts made by Brazil to reduce disparities and considered it especially important that it continue preserving the rights of indigenous peoples.
81. Belgium congratulated Brazil on the adoption of its first National Action Plan on Women, Peace and Security.
82. Bhutan noted the steps taken by Brazil to strengthen its legal and institutional human rights framework, reduce poverty and promote social equity.
83. Botswana commended Brazil for its measures to reduce poverty and improve social security. It noted areas of concern, including police violence.
84. Burkina Faso welcomed the achievements of Brazil in the field of birth registration and welcomed its efforts in promoting human rights education.
85. Cabo Verde commended the positive measures taken by Brazil since the last universal periodic review and encouraged it to continue its progress despite current difficulties.
86. Canada recognized the achievements of Brazil regarding social, economic and cultural rights, in particular the eradication of extreme poverty and hunger.

87. Chad welcomed the creation by Brazil of a national human rights indicators system, and its engagement with the treaty bodies and OHCHR. It recognized the contribution of Brazil to OHCHR through a technical cooperation project.
88. Chile highlighted the progress made in Brazil and called upon Brazil to intensify efforts to reduce high homicide rates and armed violence.
89. China welcomed efforts to reduce poverty, combat racial discrimination and modern slavery and adopted laws to guarantee the rights of vulnerable persons.
90. The delegation of Brazil reaffirmed that the inclusion of people with disabilities was being mainstreamed by the Federal Government in education, health, housing and other policies. A landmark in this connection was the Brazilian inclusion law, which guaranteed improved social inclusion, and the amendment of the Civil Code, improving legislation on physical accessibility and accessibility in the area of communication.
91. Regarding women's rights, the Women Living Without Violence programme had promoted strategic actions to combat violence against women. This had also been reinforced by the criminalization of femicide, as a heinous crime. Between 2004 and 2014 the average income of employed women increased by 61 per cent, exceeding for the first time the threshold of 70 per cent of men's income. In the same vein, women accounted for 31 per cent of the candidates in the 2014 elections, compared to 22.43 per cent in 2010.
92. In regard to the rights of the child, the Happy Child programme was aimed at breaking the cycle in which malnutrition and poverty in early childhood jeopardized the future of new generations. The guarantee of children's rights had been further reinforced by new legislation that had prohibited corporal punishment and that had made sexual exploitation of children and adolescents a heinous crime.
93. The delegation of Brazil stated that in 2013 the national system for the promotion of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender rights had been created to allow coordination of public policies on that subject. In 2015, the Federal Government had established the Interministerial Committee to Combat Homophobia. The Supreme Federal Court had legalized civil unions between people of the same sex.
94. Brazil had also made use of all legal measures available regarding corporate accountability for human rights abuses. Concerning the accident at the Fundão Dam in 2015, emergency aid had been paid directly to about 20,000 people. By March 2017, the equivalent of approximately US$566 million had been invested in redress. In addition, significant fines had been levied against the companies responsible for the disaster. The courts were evaluating a lawsuit for approximately $55 billion that had been filed by competent authorities against the companies in question.
95. Regarding contemporary forms of slavery, a constitutional amendment allowing for expropriation of properties where labour conditions analogous to slavery were found had been passed in 2014. The National Plan for Eradication of Slave Labour had been adopted in 2016. People and companies caught up using such labour were included in a "dirty list", last published in March 2017.
96. Since its last review, Brazil had adopted significant measures to promote and protect the right of migrants and refugees. In 2012, it started issuing visas on a humanitarian basis to Haitians affected by the earthquake in that country. The following year, Brazil adopted an open-door policy for persons affected by the Syrian crisis. In April 2017, the Congress had adopted a new immigration law, which reinforced the human rights perspective in Brazilian migration policy. The new legislation established as guiding principles the fight against xenophobia, racism and discrimination, non-criminalization of migration, social and labour inclusion, and the protection of children and adolescents.
97. Colombia highlighted the commitment of offering differentiated health and education services to indigenous populations.
98. Côte d'Ivoire noted the will of authorities to cooperate with United Nations mechanisms and integrate their principles into national legislation.
99. Germany commended progress made, and made three recommendations.

100. Czechia welcomed the efforts by Brazil to monitor and assess the realization of human rights through a system of indicators and an online platform for international human rights recommendations.
101. Denmark noted with concern the prison conditions encountered by women who in that vulnerable situation had specific needs and requirements.
102. Ecuador acknowledged the efforts made in the fight against poverty and slave labour, as well as the promotion of the equality of persons with disabilities.
103. Egypt commended the efforts made by Brazil towards social equality, to reduce poverty and to combat child labour.
104. El Salvador commended Brazil on having ratified most of the human rights instruments and for the incorporation of the human rights principles into its national legislation.
105. Estonia acknowledged the efforts of Brazil to enhance the protection of human rights, including by implementing differentiated services for indigenous peoples in the areas of health and education.
106. Ethiopia commended Brazil for its success in lifting 36 million Brazilians out of extreme poverty between 2004 and 2014 and noted with appreciation the accelerated growth and employment creation strategies.
107. Finland commended Brazil for its efforts to promote the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons but expressed concern about increased homophobia and transphobia and about criminal measures against lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons, as well as about the possible rejection of policies aimed at overcoming gender and sexual orientation inequalities in schools.
108. France commended the establishment of a national human rights institution and acknowledged the positive commitments of the authorities to promote women's rights and gender equality.
109. Gabon welcomed the social programmes aimed at promoting women's rights and those aimed at promoting the rights of the child and improving children's quality of life.
110. Georgia highlighted steps taken by Brazil to reduce extreme poverty and fight against modern slavery and positively noted the measures taken in promoting children's rights.
111. Croatia commended Brazil for steps taken with regard to promotion and protection of the rights of children, especially homeless children.
112. Ghana was concerned that only two states, Rio de Janeiro and Pernambuco, had set up local preventive mechanisms to achieve effective impact on inhibiting torture and ill-treatment.
113. Greece highlighted the establishment of the National Human Rights Council in 2014 and the firm commitment and remarkable efforts in combating slave labour.
114. Guatemala was concerned about the reports of the growing number of incidents of armed violence, including murders.
115. Haiti welcomed the success of the social programme aimed at reducing poverty by affirmative action policies.
116. The Holy See welcomed the initiatives aimed at poverty reduction, for example the Bolsa Família initiative.
117. Honduras encouraged Brazil to continue along the path to eradicate discrimination affecting persons of African descent.
118. Iceland regretted that women continued to be prosecuted in cases of unlawful abortion and noted that access to legal abortion was not always available for victims of sexual violence.

119. India encouraged Brazil to enhance its efforts towards providing health care and education to its indigenous people and Afro-Brazilians.
120. Indonesia welcomed the establishment of the National System to Prevent and Combat Torture, in 2013, and the adoption of the National Education Plan for 2014-2024.
121. The Islamic Republic of Iran commended the achievements in the domain of social and economic rights, including poverty alleviation, promoting social equality, combating slave labour, and health.
122. Iraq commended combating of police violence and of rights violations by the police, and combating slavery, and welcomed the National Education Plan for 2014-2024.
123. Ireland welcomed the creation of the National System to Prevent and Combat Torture. It was concerned about incidents of targeted killings of human rights defenders.
124. Israel commended the establishment of the National Human Rights Council, the Committee to Fight Homophobia and the National Plan to Combat Human Trafficking.
125. Italy welcomed measures to combat slave labour, the adoption of laws concerning human trafficking and femicide, and the establishment of the National System to Prevent and Combat Torture.
126. Japan commended Brazil for improving the school enrolment rate and literacy rate, and appreciated efforts regarding minimizing racial discrimination.
127. Lebanon commended Brazil for measures taken to combat human trafficking, violence against women and exploitation of women.
128. Libya commended the adoption of policies to combat poverty, the education plan for 2014-2024 and the promotion of better health care.
129. Liechtenstein welcomed the adoption of the “Boy Bernardo Act”, but it was concerned that corporal punishment remained widely practised. It also welcomed the efforts made by Brazil to eradicate child labour.
130. Madagascar welcomed the adoption of the national primary care policy and of the national education plan for 2014-2024, and the successful application of positive discrimination.
131. Malaysia commended Brazil for its determination to pursue development, social justice and the strengthening of civil and political rights of its citizens. Malaysia encouraged Brazil to continue to combat poverty.
132. Maldives commended the efforts made by Brazil to eradicate child labour, and its progress in the health sector. It applauded its “National Policy of Primary Attention”.
133. Mexico acknowledged the progress made by Brazil in social assistance and poverty reduction and in combating gender-based violence, and welcomed the new migration law.
134. Mongolia welcomed the initiatives of Brazil to protect human rights defenders and underlined its progress on improving the conditions of vulnerable groups.
135. Brazil thanked the delegations for their constructive participation and encouraging comments. It thanked the troika and the Secretariat, as well as the civil society organizations, human rights defenders and academics, and the people in Brazil.
