I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The delegation of the Islamic Republic of Iran stated that the Islamic Republic of Iran greatly valued the universal periodic review as a unique process that examined the human rights situation of all United Nations member States on an equal footing. For the Islamic Republic of Iran, human rights were part and parcel of its rationality with deep roots in Islam.

6. Following the adoption of the recommendations from the previous cycle, the High Council for Human Rights had established, in August 2015, the National Follow-up Committee, which comprised representatives from the relevant departments, to implement the accepted recommendations. That same year, the NGOs Consultative Committee had been formed. Once categorized, recommendations had been forwarded for implementation to the appropriate executive departments in the Government, as well as to the relevant non-governmental organizations (NGOs). The national report had been prepared by a drafting committee with the participation of and input from the above-mentioned stakeholders. It addressed almost all of the recommendations from the second review cycle.

7. Since the previous cycle, the Islamic Republic of Iran had adopted a number of major policies, laws and regulations, such as the Charter of Citizenship Rights (December 2016); the amended Anti-Narcotics Law (November 2015); the Law on the Protection of the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (January 2018); the new Code of Criminal Procedure (June 2015), incorporating international human rights standards, including the rights of the accused (stipulation of protective mechanisms), as well as the definition and prohibition of torture.

8. The Islamic Republic of Iran had faced serious challenges while working towards the implementation of the recommendations and more generally on the improvement of the human rights situation in the country.

9. The first impediment was the economic sanctions, known as unilateral coercive measures. They thwarted the full achievement of economic and social development and the enjoyment of a number of rights stipulated in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and other instruments, including the rights to life, health, work and development.

10. The Islamic Republic of Iran condemned terrorism, which it believed led to gross violations of human rights and threatened the political, social and economic development of nations. It considered itself one of the major victims of terrorism and at the same time one of its strongest opponents.

11. As a party to the core human rights instruments, the Islamic Republic of Iran continued to fully participate in international deliberations and activities aimed at the promotion of human rights. The Islamic Republic of Iran had actively cooperated with the United Nations human rights mechanisms, including OHCHR. Two high-level delegations from OHCHR had visited Tehran in 2018 and 2019. The Islamic Republic of Iran had extended formal invitations to the Special Rapporteurs on the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health, on the right to food, and on the negative impact of unilateral coercive measures on the enjoyment of human rights. Furthermore, an official invitation had been extended to the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, as well.

12. Over the past five years, the Islamic Republic of Iran had continued bilateral human rights and judicial cooperation with a number of countries, including Australia, Brazil, China, Denmark, Iraq, Italy, Japan, Qatar, the Russian Federation and Switzerland.

15. In response to the questions raised during the interactive dialogue, the delegation of the Islamic Republic of Iran stated that, with regard to women's rights, article 101 of the Sixth National Development Plan spotlighted gender justice in order to support the fundamental rights of women in many areas, such as the right to education, employment, social security and health care. As for combating violence against women and girls, the Act on Protection, Dignity and Security of Women against Violence aimed at criminalizing new forms of assault, harassment and violations of the rights of women and adopting preventive and support measures to stop violence against women. Moreover, a new law had been enacted to stiffen punishment for acid attackers and support the victims of such attacks. In addition, premature marriage had been criminalized in accordance with article 50 of the Family Protection Act. Finally, a bill had been adopted by Parliament to allow children born of Iranian women and foreign men to apply for Iranian citizenship.

16. In the area of education, the literacy rate had increased from 87.1 per cent in 2015 to 88.8 per cent in 2018. Moreover, women's presence in higher education was on the rise: they accounted for 56 per cent of total students at Iranian universities and 24 per cent of the academic staff. Women participated actively in political processes. Their presence in managerial roles had grown from 14.9 per cent in 2017 to 18.3 per cent in 2018. The number of female candidates for parliamentary elections had increased 21-fold, resulting in a 4.5-fold increase in the number of women members of parliament. In addition, the number of women entering city and village councils had increased threefold, while 4,029 women had entered the previous round of council elections.

17. Measures to protect children's rights included the establishment of special inspection branches and criminal court branches to deal with child abuse cases in the judiciary; the establishment of a text-messaging platform to combat child abuse in 2017, and the implementation of a nationwide scheme by the Ministry of Education to prevent violence against children. In addition, bills already drafted and going through the adoption process dealt with moral compensation for child victims of sex crimes and the prohibition of early marriage.

18. Steps taken with regard to persons with disabilities included the adoption of a comprehensive support law, a national strategic document on accommodation, adoption of a law obliging government departments to allocate 3 per cent of their employment quota to such persons, and the provision of free education.

19. There had been a veritable judicial renaissance in the Islamic Republic of Iran. For example, alternative forms of punishment were being introduced in some cases. Compulsory detention warrants were not enforceable. It was mandatory for the accused to choose a lawyer. All court verdicts were considered appealable. The Government was obliged to compensate persons charged for any reason during a preliminary investigation who were subsequently acquitted. A different punishment system applied to those under 18, who were no longer subject to the death penalty. Instead, juvenile offenders could be detained in correctional centres for up to five years. Under the amnesty mechanism, between 2015 and 2018, 1,755 convicts sentenced to capital punishment had been pardoned. In other categories of punishment, 810 women, 239 foreign nationals and 137 convicts under 18 had been granted an amnesty. To mark the 40th anniversary of the victory of the Iranian Revolution, 85,000 convicts had received amnesties in January 2019.

20. As part of efforts to safeguard the rights of religious minorities, four members of such minorities had been elected to the committee tasked with drafting the new Constitution. Five seats in Parliament had been set aside for religious minorities, who were free to publish books, Bibles and so forth. In addition, minorities in the Islamic Republic of Iran were free to choose their schools, hospitals, etc.

21. The Charter of Citizenship Rights, decreed by the President in 2016, functioned as an administrative mechanism providing maximum implementation of the principles, values, norms and laws stipulated in the Constitution. The Constitution recognized the rights to freedom of expression, assembly and demonstration. According to the Charter, citizens of the Islamic Republic of Iran were eligible to establish, join and participate in parties, societies, and social, cultural, scientific, political and trade associations, provided they respected the law. In addition, article 45 of the Charter emphasized the right of active political/civil NGOs to access information. Thus far, over 25,000 NGOs had been granted permission to carry out activities by the competent authorities, and 63 NGOs had gained consultative status with the Economic and Social Council.

22. As far as refugees were concerned, the Islamic Republic of Iran had the fourth largest population of refugees and asylum seekers in the world. Despite inhuman and illegal unilateral sanctions, the Islamic Republic of Iran provided appropriate education, health-care, livelihood and settlement services for refugees and asylum seekers through allocation of massive funds and domestic resources. Unfortunately, the international aid received in that regard covered a scant 3 per cent of the costs incurred by the Islamic Republic of Iran.

23. The Islamic Republic of Iran had sustained enormous human and financial losses over the last 40 years as part of its struggle against the production and trafficking of narcotics. As outlined in a report by the United Nations Office for Drugs and Crime (UNODC) in 2016, the Islamic Republic of Iran was credited as the standard-bearer for combating drug trafficking, with 17 per cent, 61 per cent and 75 per cent of total global seizures of heroin, morphine and opium, respectively. Between 2014 and 2017, law enforcement officials had seized 3,000 tons of various narcotics during 8,238 operations, in which 44 agents had been killed and 16 wounded.

24. As regards health care, even before the Declaration of Alma-Ata, the Islamic Republic of Iran had recognized primary health care as the key to universal access to health care. Over the previous four decades, it had created more than 17,000 rural health houses and 4,000 urban health posts. By connecting them to more than 2,500 comprehensive urban health centres, it had been able to cover nearly 100 per cent of the urban population and more than 90 per cent of the rural population. The establishment of those facilities countrywide had led to a reduction in maternal mortality from more than 200 per 100,000 live births in the 1980s to less than 20 per 100,000 live births in 2018, and a drop in the infant mortality rate from 120 per 1,000 live births in the 1980s to 13.4 per 1,000 live births in 2018. During the same period, child immunization coverage had increased by nearly 98 per cent. The Islamic Republic of Iran had succeeded in obtaining World Health Organization (WHO) certification for the elimination of measles, rubella and trachoma, and taken steps to eliminate malaria through integrated people-centred health services. In the field of non-communicable diseases, the country had recently run a mass campaign, mobilizing young persons, students and care providers to screen for hypertension, which had covered more than 30 million people over the age of 30. Some two million Iranians unaware of their illness had been identified and taken care of through the health system. In other initiatives, four stages of complementary polio immunization had been conducted in 2018 and 2019. During each stage, 1.2 million children under the age of 5 had been actively vaccinated, house by house, in high-risk areas for polio. In addition, free outpatient treatment of tuberculosis and AIDS was continuing, and all primary health-care services were provided free of charge to foreign nationals and immigrants/refugees.

25. Cooperation with United Nations reporting mechanisms was very broad. A large number of thematic special rapporteurs had already visited the country, and more such visits had been scheduled.
