Civil society calls for increased transparency and a clear timeline for the 2021 annual update of the United Nations database of businesses engaged with the Israeli settlement enterprise

The release of the United Nations (UN) database of businesses engaged in activities related to Israeli settlements (database) in the Occupied Palestinian Territory on 12 February 2020 provides an important tool to begin to address Israel's illegal settlement enterprise and ensure corporate accountability in the context of a prolonged military occupation, colonization and apartheid. The first database report included 112 businesses, mostly domiciled in Israel as well as eighteen companies in six other countries.¹ The annual updating of the database is essential to ensuring it becomes a living tool. The database establishes a tangible mechanism strengthening the implementation of international law, particularly in relation to states' obligations to ensure corporate respect for human rights, as well as the responsibility of businesses to respect international human rights and humanitarian law as reaffirmed by the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights (UNGPs), including in situations of occupation.

Due to pervasive impunity, Israel's illegal settlement enterprise has been allowed to operate and expand in violation of international law. This has been supported by non-state and private actors such as business enterprises. According to the 2013 report of the independent international fact-finding mission to investigate the implications of the Israeli settlements, "[...] business enterprises unfold their activities in the settlements and contribute to their maintenance, development and consolidation."² Businesses have played a critical role in the sustainability of Israel's illegal settlements and are at great risk of contributing to or benefiting from Israel's persistent and systemic violations of international law committed against the Palestinian people.

While the world faces the devastating impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic, Israel is escalating its illegal demolition of Palestinian homes and properties, hitting a four-year high³, in violation of, among other rights, the Palestinians' human right to adequate housing, a crucial component of the right to an adequate standard of living.⁴ Since March 2020 to January 2021, Israel has demolished 470 structures, including 211 residential structures, 166 of which were inhabited, resulting in the displacement of 811 Palestinians, including 382 children.⁵ House demolitions, which are made possible through the use of equipment provided by companies such as JCP, Caterpillar and Hyundai⁶, assist Israel's settlement expansion and de facto annexation. At the same time, Israel has accelerated the expansion of its illegal settlements, housing units, and associated infrastructure including transportation, in which Israeli and multinational companies such as the Basque CAF have evidently been involved.⁷

Since the adoption of Human Rights Council (HRC) resolution 31/36 in 2016 mandating the Office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) to create the database, members of the United Nations as well as civil society organizations from all regions, have persistently expressed support for the database and its annual update.⁸ Some Member States have explicitly supported the process⁹, whereas other states stressed the importance of its release - despite delays due to political pressure - in order to preserve the independence of the OHCHR.¹⁰

In October 2020, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Palestinian territory occupied since 1967 welcomed the release of the database in his report to the General Assembly and highlighted that it puts “a spotlight on corporate activity – both Israeli and international – in the settlements and advances public and corporate understanding of the adverse human rights environment sustained by the settlements.”¹¹

He also raised concerns that in the first report of the database “a number of companies with important supply relationships with the settlements and/or the occupation were not included” and called for these concerns to be addressed by properly identifying “the scope of all business involvement with the settlements and the occupation” in order for the database to serve as a “living tool”.¹²

In line with HRC resolution 31/36, the OHCHR is mandated to annually update the database, including by adding businesses engaged in activities related to Israeli settlements and removing listed companies when there is clear proof of disengagement. This provides an important deterrent for businesses against engaging with the illegal settlement enterprise

Local, regional, and international organizations remain committed to continuing to support the OHCHR's work on the database. In this context, our organizations urge:

1. The OHCHR to continue to work toward the annual update of the database and publicly share the 2021 update upon completion of the review.
2. The OHCHR to increase transparency regarding the annual update process for the database, including by providing a clear and public timeline for the publication of the 2021 update.
3. Member States of the United Nations to support the OHCHR in fulfilling its mandate in its entirety to annually update the UN database and ensure the allocation of necessary financial resources to this end.
4. Member States that are home states of companies listed in the database must take the necessary measures to ensure that business enterprises within their territory and/or jurisdiction respect international law and other relevant laws throughout their operations and relationships in the Occupied Palestinian Territory. To this end, states should deny businesses listed in the UN database and others that are involved in violations of international law access to public support and services, including by excluding them from public procurements.
5. Member States should issue clear guidelines and advisories to private actors and business enterprises - in line with international law - surrounding risks and legal repercussions of grave breaches of international law should they be involved with Israel's settlement enterprise.

The Civic Coalition for Palestinian Rights in Jerusalem, the Palestinian Counselling Centre, the Palestinian Non-Governmental Organizations Network, Addameer Prisoner Support and Human Rights Association, the Community Action Center (Al-Quds University), the Jerusalem Center for Legal Aid and Human Rights, NGO(s) without consultative status, also share the views expressed in this statement.
