Part I

Article 1

Object and purpose

The object and purpose of the present Covenant is to promote and ensure the full, equal and meaningful enjoyment of the right to development by every individual and all peoples everywhere, and to guarantee its effective operationalization and full implementation at the national and international levels.

Article 2

Definitions

For the purposes of the present Covenant:

(a) “Legal person” means any entity that possesses its own legal personality under domestic or international law and is not a natural person, a people or a State;

(b) “International organization” means an organization established by a treaty or other instrument governed by international law and possessing its own international legal personality; international organizations may include, in addition to States, other entities as members.

Article 3

General principles

To achieve the object and purpose of the present Covenant and to implement its provisions, the States Parties shall be guided by, inter alia, the principles set out below:

(a) Development centred on the individual and peoples: the individual and peoples are the central subjects of development and must be the active participants and beneficiaries of the right to development;

(b) Principles common to all human rights: the right to development should be realized in a manner that reflects the universality, inalienability, indivisibility, interdependence and interrelatedness of all human rights and integrates the principles of equality, non-discrimination, intersectionality, empowerment, participation, transparency, accountability, equity, inclusion, accessibility and subsidiarity;

(c) Human rights-based development: as development is a human right that is indivisible from and interrelated and interdependent with all other human rights, the laws, policies and practices of development, including development cooperation, must be normatively anchored in a system of rights and corresponding obligations established by international law. Accordingly, the promotion of, respect for and enjoyment of certain human rights and fundamental freedoms cannot justify the denial of other human rights and fundamental freedoms;

(d) Contribution of development to the enjoyment of all human rights: development, as described in the present Covenant, is essential for the improvement of living standards and the welfare of individuals and peoples and contributes to the enjoyment of all other human rights;

(e) Principles of international law concerning friendly relations and cooperation among States: the realization of the right to development requires full respect for the principles of international law concerning friendly relations and cooperation among States in accordance with the Charter of the United Nations;

(f) Self-determined development: the priorities of development are determined by individuals and peoples as rights holders in a manner consistent with the provisions of the present Covenant. The right to development and the right to self-determination of peoples are integral to each other and mutually reinforcing;

(g) Sustainable development: development must be achieved in its three dimensions, namely, economic, social and environmental, in an inclusive, balanced and integrated manner and in harmony with nature. The right to development must be fulfilled so as to equitably meet the developmental and environmental needs of present and future generations; and the right to development cannot be realized if development is unsustainable;

(h) The right and the duty to regulate: States Parties have the right, on behalf of the rights holders, as well as the duty, to take regulatory or other related measures to realize the right to development on their territory in accordance with international law, and consistent with the provisions of the present Covenant;

(i) National and international solidarity: the realization of the right to development requires an enabling national and international environment created through a spirit of cooperation and unity among individuals, peoples, States and international organizations, encompassing the union of interests, purposes and actions and the recognition of different needs and rights to achieve common goals everywhere. This principle includes the duty to cooperate with full respect for the principles of international law;

(j) South-South and triangular cooperation as a complement to North-South cooperation: South-South and triangular cooperation contribute to the realization of the right to development. They are not a substitute for, but rather a complement to, North-South cooperation;

(k) Universal duty to respect human rights: everyone has the duty to respect all human rights, including the right to development, in accordance with international law;

(l) Right and responsibility of individuals, peoples, groups and organs of society to promote and protect human rights: in accordance with international law, everyone has the right, individually and in association with others, to promote and to strive for the protection and realization of the right to development at the national and international levels. Individuals, peoples, groups, institutions and non-governmental organizations also have an important role and a responsibility in contributing, as appropriate, to the promotion of the right of everyone to a social and international order in which the right to development can be fully realized.

4. The States Parties to the present Covenant, including those having responsibility for the administration of Non-Self-Governing Territories, shall promote the realization of the right to self-determination, and shall respect that right, in conformity with the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and international law.
