1. Africa-America Institute

(General consultative status granted in 1995)

The mission of the Africa-America Institute (AAI) is to expand educational and professional training opportunities for Africans, foster greater understanding of Africa in America, and promote mutually beneficial United States-Africa relations. Founded in 1953, the Africa-America Institute is a multiracial, multi-ethnic, non-profit organization, with offices in New York and Washington, D.C., and a presence in 20 African countries. With funds provided by multilateral donors, the United States Government, and private foundation and corporate donors, it pursues its mission through work in three programme areas: human resource development; bridging and policy; and trade, investment and economic development. More information on AAI's programme areas is available at its web site: <http://www.aaionline.org>.

Participation in the Economic and Social Council and its subsidiary bodies and conferences

AAI staff members have attended numerous conferences since gaining consultative status at the United Nations. AAI's interests range from the educational to economic and social development, and this has been reflected in the United Nations-related events in which the staff have participated. Some examples of events in which it has participated are:

(a) African Women and Economic Development: Investing In Our Future, Economic Commission for Africa, Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, 28 April-1 May 1998;

(b) First Global Forum on Human Development, United Nations, July 1999;

(c) Commission on the Status of Women, 1-19 March 1999.

Cooperation with United Nations bodies and specialized agencies

In general the Africa-America Institute coordinates closely with UNDP on matters of overall African development. The Institute also cooperates closely with UNIFEM to promote effective policies for women in Africa. This led to the joint sponsorship of various conferences including those listed below.

(a) The Conference, African Women in Politics: Together For Change was held in Gaborone, Botswana, 6-9 May 1995, and co-sponsored by the Africa-America Institute, Emang Basadi, UNIFEM, and Women in Law and Development in Africa. It brought together 60 women from 22 countries to consult among themselves on how to get more women into political office. Together for Change, AAI's brochure based on the presentation at the consultation, has been widely distributed;

(b) In September 1995, a delegation from the Africa-America Institute attended the Fourth World Conference on Women, in Beijing, China. There AAI worked in consultation with other women's groups to organize a one-and-a-half day African Regional Congress for Women in Politics to enlarge on the women-in-politics database begun in Botswana;

(c) A networking meeting of the African governmental and non-governmental representatives to the Commission on the Status of Women was held at AAI's offices in March 1997. The event was organized in conjunction with UNIFEM and Friedrich Ebert Stiftung;

(d) As part of efforts by UNOPS to ensure a democratic transition from military government to a freely elected civilian government in Sierra Leone, UNDP engaged AAI to provide academic placement services for 15 members of the National Provisional Ruling Council. The project ended in 1998;

(e) In March 1998, AAI and UNDP welcomed the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson at the United Nations. As Special Envoy of the President and Secretary of State for the Promotion of Democracy in Africa, Jackson spoke to an audience of 250 diplomats, business people and community activists on "Africa's march towards democracy";

(f) Various briefings were arranged at AAI's New York offices and at the United Nations between officers of AAI and UNDP to discuss various issues pertaining to social and economic development in Africa. Subjects included connectivity issues in Africa and stimulating economic development in southern Africa;

(g) AAI was invited to collaborate in numerous UNDP and UNOPS activities, including Enterprise

Africa, a new regional programme of UNDP/Africa launched in spring 1999.

Other relevant activities

Through its programme work AAI has continued to support United Nations determinations to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom, and to employ machinery for the promotion of the economic and social advancement of all peoples.

Between 1995 and 1998, the Institute continued to administer undergraduate, graduate and postgraduate fellowships for Africans studying at American universities. They are designed to prepare Fellows to make, upon their return, positive changes that will further African development. Apart from administering training programmes, in 1997 and 1998, AAI sponsored several symposia in Africa to enhance leadership skills and exchange ideas and information on pressing issues to Africans. These included:

(a) A forum entitled Gender, Empowerment and Sustainable Development in Africa, held in Blantyre, Malawi, in February 1997, focused on how men and women can work together in effective partnerships;

(b) A conference entitled Partnerships in Higher Education in Africa brought together 40 delegates from 17 countries in Gaborone, Botswana, in August 1997;

(c) A round table entitled Connecting Worlds: Africa and the United States in the Information Age, in September 1997, brought participants together to discuss the role of information technology in African development and the creation of a greater information technology infrastructure on the continent. The roundtable resulted in the production of a brochure of the roundtable proceedings;

(d) Various conferences on the theme of economic development in Africa, including Private-sector Stake in Southern African Development, which was held in Windhoek, Namibia, in December 1996. The conference was co-sponsored by the Governments of Japan and Namibia, the Japanese Federation of Economic Organizations and the Southern African Development Community.

2. Tunisian Mothers' Association

(Special consultative status granted in 1997)

The objectives of the objectives of the Tunisian Mothers' Association (TMA), established at the beginning of the last decade of the twentieth century (11 August 1992), are to assist mothers in need and encourage them to meet all their family, social, community and civic responsibilities.

At the regional level, taking into account the divisions within the United Nation, TMA is a member of several networks within Tunisia's geographical and political ambit, including:

(a) At the Arab level, the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA); TMA has participated in all conferences held in preparation for and follow-up to the Fourth World Conference on Women and in preparatory and follow-up conferences for other regional and global events organized by the United Nations;

(b) At the African level, the African Women's Development and Communication Network (FEMNET), of which TMA is Vice-Chairperson and Coordinator for North Africa;

(c) At the North African level, the Association maghrébine des mères (North African Mothers' Association), which TMA has chaired since the Association's 1999 organizational conference in Tunis; and

(d) At the Mediterranean level, the Association des mères de la Méditerranée (Mediterranean Mothers' Association) and the Forum des femmes de la Méditerranée (Mediterranean Women's Forum).

At the global level, TMA is a member of the Conference of Non-governmental Organizations in Consultative Relationship with the United Nations (CONGO) and of the World Family Organization (formerly the International Union of Family Organizations (IUFO)), of which it was elected president at the 1997 executive board meeting in Brazil. It has held the presidency of the Commission internationale des familles rurales (International Rural Families' Committee) since 1996 and of the World Family Organization's international women's committee since the April 2000 executive board meeting in Tunis and the vice-presidency of the Commission internationale de la jeunesse (International Youth Committee) since the 1996 executive board meeting in Barcelona.

Strengthened by its membership in this global network of organizations, TMA has taken part in all United Nations international conferences. In the context of follow-up to the Beijing Platform for Action, it has participated actively in the work of those conferences (by, inter alia, sponsoring workshops on key social issues such as the role of mothers in the family) and in all the meetings of the Commission on the Status of Women in New York.

In pursuit of its objectives in the field of development, TMA has made repeated changes in its charter in order to adapt its structure continually to emerging needs.

Thus, its membership has increased from 12 founding members in 1992 to 5,000 at its first electoral conference in 1996, 10,000 in 1998 and 15,000 in 2000.

Regional committees

In 1996, it maintained 23 regional committees, one in the capital of each of Tunisia's governorates (prefectures), in order to be as close as possible to mothers; that number rose to 27 in 1997-1998 with an administrative decision to subdivide the national coordination committees and to 30 in 1999 with the inclusion of professional committees. In 2000, the expansion of TMA activities made it necessary to increase the number of regional bodies at the delegation (sub-prefectural) level through the establishment of local committees (10 to 15 per regional committee).

TMA branches abroad

On the principle that the needs of women living outside Tunisia must also be met, TMA has developed a branch network of Tunisian members residing abroad in order to help them live harmoniously in a bicultural environment and to maintain ongoing contact with their country of origin.

The number of branches has risen. In 1996, 17 European branches were established, most of them in France, Germany and Italy, which have many Tunisian communities and where emigrant mothers face the most difficult problems. That number rose to 22 in 1997 with the addition of branches in the United States of America and Canada; to 32 in 1998, when Tunisian mothers living in Arab countries also felt the need to establish branches; to 40 in 1999 with the addition of North African branches; and to a total of 45 as at 2000.

Anniversary of the change

Caravans were organized by all the branches of TMA in the country's various governorates, to serve needy families, families in "grey areas" and single mothers. In 1996, 690 families received assistance (clothes, blankets, foodstuffs); in 1997, this figure rose to 950 families (clothes, blankets, foodstuffs, hygiene products, mattresses, medicines, crutches); in 1998, 1,400 families (clothes, blankets, foodstuffs, hygiene products, mattresses, medicines, beds); in 1999, 2,000 families (clothes, blankets, foodstuffs, hygiene products, mattresses, medicines, beds, crutches and monetary gifts); and in the year 2000, it is expected that 2,500 families will be helped (clothes, blankets, foodstuffs, hygiene products, mattresses, medicines, beds).

Environment

TMA adapts its activities to environmental priorities adopted at the national level. Clearly, promoting awareness is the most difficult task.

In 1996, TMA organized awareness-raising campaigns on the themes "Saving our environment", "Working together for clean beaches" and "One child = one tree". Planting activities were organized on a number of sites, particularly schools, during the multidisciplinary caravans, encouraging children to take a public spirited attitude to the environment.

In 1997, the main activity was the integrated project conducted in El Khadra, a housing complex in Tunis, to promote awareness of the need to sort organic refuse from recyclable items. Refuse bins of two different colours were distributed to the citizens. A follow-up survey was conducted and the results were broadly satisfactory.

In 1998, the theme "Biodiversity and biological rarefaction in Tunisia" was adopted. An exhibition and tasting of plant-based foods and herbal teas were held, with participation by children at the cultural level; this took place under the slogan "Using the plants in our environment".

In 1999, sustainable development was the theme of the year's activity, designed to encourage rational use of resources (fauna and flora) and to combat deforestation. As a follow-up to its 1998 activity, TMA is planning to publish a nomenclature of medicinal plants found in the local environment, in simple language which can be understood by all mothers.

For the year 2000, the theme will be marine pollution and protecting the seashore from contamination. A lecture will be given by a woman scientist who specializes in this field, and children will as usual be in charge of the cultural aspect.

TMA has also played an effective part in various seminars and discussions at the national and international levels organized by environmental associations and by the World Environment Fund (WEF), under the auspices of the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP).

Information, communication and publishing activities

Mères-Échos, created in 1993, is a periodical published by TMA every two months (i.e. six issues per year). Its target audience comprises mothers in Tunisia and abroad, who are informed of developments within the association itself and events in Tunisia as a whole (elections, national days devoted to particular issues, etc.).

In addition to its coverage of United Nations events, Mères-Échos has monitored and reported on the participation of TMA in international conferences held over the past decade, including the World Conference on Human Rights, the International Conference on Population and Development, the World Summit for Social Development, the Fourth World Conference on Women and the World Food Summit.

The communication activities of TMA also include broadcasts (via radio and television) of features of interest to mothers; these serve as a vehicle for principles of family education. For families residing outside Tunisia there is a weekly feature every Sunday, broadcast via satellite, involving TMA branches established in countries where there are large numbers of Tunisian families.

Following the declaration of Tunis as a cultural capital by UNESCO in 1997, TMA showed its fertile imagination and pride in its cultural heritage by deciding to develop that heritage, to disseminate it and to serve the cause to which TMA is dedicated: supporting and helping others.

To that end, drawing upon the highly diversified role of Tunisian mothers in everyday life, with input from leaders in all professional fields, TMA produced a masterpiece entitled La Mère tunisienne, tradition et modernité. This book, which simultaneously covers two areas — culinary art and traditional dress — and tells of the country's glorious heritage, was voted one of the best publications of the new era. It serves to promote social solidarity, for many copies have been sold, generating funds and helping to finance the association's noble cause.

4. Brothers of Charity

(Special consultative status granted in 1995)

Aims and purposes

The mission of the Brothers of Charity is the facilitation of well-being and development of individuals and groups who are at risk due to psychological, economic, or sociological conditions. Traditionally, the Brothers of Charity have focused on establishing educational services for children regardless of their economic, religious, or social background. Apart from school services worldwide, service centres have been established for individuals with severe mental health problems and disabilities. In recent years, conforming to their mission to deliver care for persons indeed, the Brothers of Charity have developed new services and projects for drug-addicted individuals, refugees, street children, and HIV clients. Care established is increasingly linked to advocacy and combined with facilitating self-advocacy. Worldwide, the Brothers are active in 24 countries. Funding of existing projects is mainly through governmental grants and charity contributions.

Participation in the Economic and Social Council and its subsidiary bodies, conferences and meetings

Sr. Maria Goetschalckx, Esq., our main representative, attends most Thursday morning non-governmental organization sessions to network with other non-governmental organizations with similar objectives. At the Economic and Social Council substantive session of 1997 (Geneva, 30 June-25 July), the Brothers of Charity expressed their support to the proposal to proclaim the year 2001 as the international year of volunteers.

Cooperation with United Nations bodies and specialized agencies

We have relied on the documents of the United Nations to formulate new visions and to reformulate our traditional viewpoints regarding our mission. We expect to have a more structured flow of documents to the United Nations from the spring of 2000, when we will have a think-tank meeting of the members of our electronic discussion group in Gent to prepare documents for the United Nations and other non-governmental organizations.

Other relevant activities

Action in implementing United Nations resolutions

Human rights. The right to human treatment: implementing more human ways of treating individuals with mental health problems. New projects for individuals with need for psychiatric care have been established or reactivated by the Brothers of Charity in countries such as Burundi, Democratic Republic of Congo, India, Ivory Coast, Mongolia, Rwanda, South Africa. These projects underscore the need for community-based care, specifically geared to providing quality of life care, coupled with therapeutic care. At the same time, these projects illustrate the possibilities beyond traditional institutional settings and their viability in rural areas, and target the change of attitude necessary to mainstream.

The right to secure re-settlement and reintegration. Since the tragic events in the region of the Great Lakes (Rwanda, Burundi, and the Congo), the Brothers of Charity have started advocacy services for individuals in refugee camps in the United Republic of Tanzania. The projects include recovery from trauma, access to education (including setting up a system of distance learning and developing means for future economic self-sufficiency through micro-enterprise).

The right of the addicted individual to reclaim drug-free human status. The Brothers of Charity take a stand in favour of developing residential and therapeutic programmes that provide non-methadone-dependent reconnection with the community. We have been successful with this treatment and want others to understand its possibilities.

Children's rights. The Brothers of Charity keep honouring their tradition of establishing schools and educational services for children who are cognitively or otherwise challenged, or who come from socio-economic groups at risk. Since 1996, the Brothers of Charity have extended this commitment by providing educational services to children in refugee camps, and by facilitating a programme in Romania for training of social workers and psychologists to improve the conditions and perspectives of street children.

Consultations and cooperation with officials of the United Nations Secretariat

In setting up our projects and in deciding on strategies and priorities, we have relied on materials of the World Summit for Social Development (1995). Within their projects, the Brothers of Charity work on highlighting and prioritizing such aspects as social integration by protection of human rights and non-discrimination, participation of the disadvantaged and vulnerable groups and persons (Summit commitment 4) and achieving universal and equitable access to quality education, high physical and mental health (commitment 5). Further elaboration of the Brothers of Charity's viewpoint will be the basis for communications and cooperation with officials within the United Nations secretariat.

Preparation of papers and/or other material

The Brothers of Charity intend to focus on a number of specific perspectives to areas of interest for the United Nations: responsible development; the right to education; human settlements; the right of proper care and treatment for individuals with psychological or physical impairments.

Other examples of consultative and substantive activities

In March 1997, the International Congress on the Quality of Life was organized and held in Gent, Belgium. At the Congress, representatives from projects of the Brothers of Charity worldwide met to discuss lines of present and future work within the frameworks of the tradition and perspectives of the Brothers of Charity and the United Nations. It was found that the concept "quality of life" can be used as a core reference notion to set standards in education, service provision, economic rights of the individual, care for individuals at risk etc. As a resolution of the Congress, the notion of "quality of life" will be a standard of reference to rate our own services worldwide and to help set standards for the community. as an outcome of the Congress, a book on the quality of life, applied to mental health service delivery, education, care and empowerment of individuals with disabilities, and other individuals and groups at risk has been published.

5. International Association for Religious Freedom

(General consultative status granted in 1995)

The International Association for Religious Freedom (IARF) was founded in 1900 as an association of individuals and groups who share a commitment to work for freedom of religion or belief through interfaith understanding and cooperation. At the end of 1998 IARF had 80 member groups, 10 national chapters, and individual members in 35 countries. The programmes of the IARF include community service and development projects, conferences, publications, and the work of its representations at the United Nations in New York and Geneva. These activities have been planned and supervised by regional offices in New York, Calcutta, Manila, and Tokyo and by the international secretariat in Oxford, England.

Participation in the work of the Economic and Social Council

In 1995 IARF was represented at the Commission on Human Rights and the Subcommission on the Promotion and Protection of Human rights by Professor Frank Field, and from 1996 the IARF was represented at those bodies in Geneva by Dr. Gianfranco Rossi. From 1995-1998 IARF had between five and seven representatives attending briefings and various committee meetings in New York.

IARF supported the development of the NGO Committee on Freedom of Religion or Belief, which has been active in New York at the United Nations since 1992. An IARF representative assisted Professor Amor, Special Rapporteur on Religious Intolerance, when he came to the United States to hold hearings. IARF was one of several non-governmental organizations to make a presentation at the hearing in New York.

IARF led the effort in promoting designation by the General Assembly of an Annual International Day for Freedom of Religion or Belief. Twenty-three non-governmental organizations, including IARF, submitted a joint proposal to the Commission on Human Rights. Since 1994 the NGO Committee on Freedom of Religion or Belief has co-sponsored, with the Committee of Religious NGOs at the United Nations and the International NGO Committee of Human Rights, the Values Caucus, an annual day for freedom of religion or belief. IARF representatives have always played a major part in planning and carrying out these programmes. The Special Rapporteur on Religious Intolerance spoke at the 1995 and 1998 events, and the General Secretary of IARF also spoke at the 1998 event.

In 1995 several IARF representatives attended and actively participated in the Fourth World Conference on Women. That same year the IARF General Secretary delivered a speech to the Values Caucus in January as part of the Preparatory Committee of the World Summit for Social Development. The General Secretary also spoke at the United Nations on 25 October 1995 at a meeting sponsored by the Committee of Religious NGOs. In 1998 the IARF General Secretary and IARF representatives Sue Nichols and Dr. Gianfranco Rossi each made a presentation at the Oslo Conference on Freedom of Religion or Belief, which was held in observance of the fiftieth anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

Since 1996 Dr. Rossi has been representing IARF at the meetings of the Commission on Human Rights. He has regularly intervened on behalf of victims of religious persecution and intolerance. These interventions are posted on the IARF web site. His interventions made at the Commission on Human Rights in 1996-1998 included statements on the violation of human rights and fundamental freedoms in any part of the world, and implementation of the Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and of Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief.

Interventions were made at the Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities (1996-1998) on the violation of human rights and fundamental freedoms in all countries, the prevention of discrimination against and the protection of minorities, the implementation of human rights with regard to women, and the elimination of all forms of intolerance and of discrimination based on religion or belief (1997, 34th meeting; 1998, 30th meeting).

Promotion of the United Nations

IARF World is published twice a year and distributed to more than 2,000 households and institutions. Specific articles supporting the United Nations covered the following subjects: religion and human rights in Europe; the special programme for non-governmental organizations at the United Nations sponsored by the Committee on Freedom of Religion or Belief; the IARF initiative in Pakistan; religious freedom in Romania; the International Criminal Court; the sixteenth anniversary of the Declaration on the Elimination of All Forms of Intolerance and Discrimination Based on Religion or Belief, discrimination in Saudi Arabia, and the persecution of religious minorities, in particular the Pandits, in Kashmir.

In 1996 IARF held its triennial Congress in Iksan, the Republic of Korea. The programme included reports by IARF representatives to the United Nations on their work in support of human rights. Those reports were included in the published Proceedings of the Congress and were also made available in 1998 on the web site of IARF. IARF also uses its web site to report on human rights law concerning religious freedom; it has links with United Nations sites and other human rights web sites.

6. International Federation on Ageing

(General consultative status granted in 1995)

During the past four years, the International Federation on Ageing (IFA) has continued its activities designed to meet its primary mission of fostering an understanding of the imperative need of older persons for independence, dignity and security. These activities have centred on the following areas of activities: advocacy, bi-annual global conferences, publications, expansion of membership throughout the globe, and an increase in communication among members.

Advocacy

Throughout the reporting period, IFA was represented at the United Nations by a team of outstanding experts in ageing policy, headed by Mrs. Helen Hamlin. They worked closely with other non-governmental organizations at the United Nations and with the Ageing Unit of the United Nations. The election of Mrs. Hamlin to head the NGO Ageing

Council indicates the esteem with which she and her colleagues are held.

IFA participated in the planning and the execution of the United Nations Year of the Older Persons, including its launch in October 1998 and the final two-day special session of the General Assembly in New York in the fall of 1999.

IFA was also represented at the World Health Organization throughout the period, and it has had a representative in Vienna.

Bi-annual global conferences

Following the inaugural first global conference in Puna, India, held in 1992 and attended by some 400 persons, IFA made the decision to sponsor such conferences every two years in different parts of the world in order to widen its influence, educate practitioners, academics, media and political leaders, and bring together a greater number of members and supporters.

The Second Global Conference of the International Federation on Ageing took place in Jerusalem, from 17 to 21 September 1995. Its theme was "Global ageing: the challenges and opportunities of the next century". Representatives of the Ageing Unit attended the Conference, and a special meeting was held to explore avenues of greater cooperation. The attendance was nearly double that of the first conference.

The Third Global Conference took place in Durban, South Africa, from 19 to 24 October 1997. Its theme was "Ageing and diversity: towards empowerment and fulfilment". Close to 1,000 participants attended from all parts of the world. It was one of the first international conferences held in South Africa following the end of apartheid. Again, United Nations representatives were active participants.

The Fourth Global Conference served as a culminating event of the United Nations-mandated Year of Older Persons. Held in Montreal, the Conference attracted 1,800 persons from some 78 countries throughout the world. Its theme was "Ageing in a society for all ages". As part of the Conference a meeting of Ministers in charge of ageing policies and programmes for their respective countries took place. Thirty-five Ministers attended, representing such diverse large countries as Argentina, Australia, Canada, the United Kingdom, China and Japan, and such developing countries as Cameroon, Mali and Malaysia.

The keynote address was given by Dr. Alexander Kalache of the World Health Organization. Other presentations were made by Dr. Alexandre Siderenko of the Ageing Unit, and a large number of Ministers participated in a televised closing session. The Conference participants reviewed and approved the IFA Montreal Declaration, which has been forwarded to the United Nations.

Publications

Throughout the period IFA continued to distribute its publications and posters. It also published a monthly bulletin, Intercom, for its membership as well as the quarterly journal Ageing International, which is distributed to its members as well as to libraries and individual subscribers. The issues of Ageing International focus on different themes, and some have been double issues. One was released as a book (Transaction Press).

The IFA Latin American office, opened some two years ago, now publishes its own IFA Ageing Journal in Spanish. It is distributed widely throughout Latin America.

In 1995, Auburn House issued an IFA book entitled Empowering Older People, edited by Daniel Thursz, Charlotte Nusberg and Johnnie Prather. Reprinted by Cassell Press of London, the book is still in circulation and available through the IFA office in Montreal.

Expansion of membership throughout the globe

During the past five years, IFA has experienced a steady growth in its membership. This is true of both regular members and of associate members. In addition individual memberships have made it possible for practitioners and academicians to join the ranks of IFA. Several Governments and some corporations are associate members (non-voting).

Today, IFA's total membership is 355 in 64 different countries of the world.

Increased communication among members

In addition to the modernization of communication equipment at its international headquarters and the almost universal use of e-mail,

IFA has created its own web pages (www.ifa-fiv.org) which has revolutionized communication among members as well as with the public at large. Its policy statements — including the IFA Montreal Declaration — are on the web, as well as important information about global ageing. Of critical importance are the links which offer access through the IFA web pages to dozens of other web pages and endless libraries of materials on ageing. These IFA web pages are a great achievement and will continue to grow in importance in the subsequent years.

Conclusion

As this quadrennial period ends, the International Federation on Ageing is engaged in a major survey of the attitudes of seniors and professionals serving the aged in relation to the goals established by the United Nations nearly 10 years ago. This multinational survey should be released in the spring of 2000.

7. International Women's Health Coalition

(Special consultative status granted in 1995)

The International Women's Health Coalition (IWHC) works to ensure the sexual and reproductive health and rights of women of all ages. IWHC believes that global well-being and social and economic justice can only be achieved by ensuring women's rights, health and equality. IWHC works to:

(a) Help women experience a healthy sexual life, free from disease, violence, disability, fear, pain and death from causes related to reproduction and sexuality;

(b) Ensure women's right to choose whether and when to bear children, enable them to make fully informed choices, and ensure their access to the services they need;

(c) Achieve policies and programmes that guarantee the well-being of women, especially those agreed upon at the International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD, 1994) and the Fourth World Conference on Women (1995);

(d) Expand women's leadership, organizational capacities and political influence on these issues at the local, national and international levels.

IWHC provides technical, financial managerial and moral support to women's organizations, advocacy groups, health and rights activists, and service providers in Africa, Asia and Latin America. Since 1995, IWHC is the secretariat for Health, Empowerment, Rights and Accountability (HERA), a group of 24 women's health advocates from 19 countries, with whom IWHC works closely in promoting implementation of the ICPD Programme of Action and the Beijing Platform for Action. Beginning in 1999, IWHC became active in supporting the participation of women's groups in Haiti and Eastern Europe in United Nations processes and joint projects with UNFPA. As a catalyst for action, IWHC forges alliances among diverse groups and individuals to influence the health and population policies and programmes of national Governments and international agencies. It publishes reports in several languages and convenes meetings on critical or neglected issues in women's health.

IWHC is supported by private foundations and individuals based in the United States and Europe; United Nations agencies; and several European Governments. Its sources of funding have not changed substantially since 1995.

IWHC's Board of Directors has grown even more international than it was in 1995, with representation from the United States, Western and Eastern Europe, Africa and Asia. The Prime Minister of Mozambique, Dr. Pascoal Mocumbi; the Permanent Representative of the Netherlands to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, Nicolaas H. Biegman; and the Chair of the United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child, Dr. Nafsiah Mboi, are among its current members.

Participation in the Economic and Social Council and other United Nations meetings

Fourth World Conference on Women, 1995, Beijing (attendance; the Vice-President of IWHC was a non-governmental member of the United States delegation; Board member Sandra Kabir was a non-governmental member of the Bangladesh delegation).

Commission on the Status of Women, March 1999, New York (attendance).

Commission on Population and Development, March 1999, New York (attendance).

Preparatory Committee of the twenty-first special session of the General Assembly to review implementation of the Programme of Action of the ICPD, March and June 1999, New York (attendance; the President of IWHC was a non-governmental member of the United States delegation).

Twenty-first special session of the General Assembly, June 1999, New York ("ICPD plus 5") (attendance; the President of IWHC was a non-governmental member of the United States delegation).

IWHC played a leading role in mobilizing women's groups internationally at the Population and Women's Conferences. In cooperation with HERA, IWHC organized the Women's Coalition for ICPD of over 100 non-governmental organizations from around the world for the twenty-first session of the General Assembly.

Cooperation with United Nations bodies and specialized agencies

IWHC has had official relations with WHO since 1994. IWHC has worked closely with WHO's Special Programme of Research, Development and Research Training in Human Reproduction (HRP) since 1990, and with the Family and Reproductive Health programme (FRH) since it began in 1995. IWHC has observer status in the Policy and Coordination Committee of HRP, and the President of IWHC has participated in the annual meetings of interested parties for FRH in Geneva.

IWHC has cooperated closely with UNFPA throughout the ICPD and the "ICPD plus 5" review. IWHC is a member of the Director-General of UNFPA's NGO Advisory Committee and a member of UNFPA's expert group on advocacy.

Other relevant activities

During the period of this report, IWHC had two contracts with WHO: one for $10,000 in 1996 to assist WHO's HRP integrate women's perspectives into their work; the other for $10,000 in 1997 to advise WHO's programmes on activities to prevent and manage unsafe abortion, and on women's perspectives and gender issues in health.

IWHC received two grants from UNFPA: a two-year grant of $100,000 in 1996 to carry out public education on the ICPD Programme of Action in the United States; and a two-year grant of $600,000 in 1997 for implementation of the ICPD Programme of Action.

8. National Council of Negro Women

(General consultative status granted in 1995)

The National Council of Negro Women (NCNW) is a voluntary, non-profit membership organization which helps women to improve the quality of life for themselves, their families and the community through social welfare programmes that reinforce human and civil rights. NCNW is an organization of organizations, and from its beginning, women of all racial and cultural backgrounds were included and welcomed to work together towards common goals.

There has been no change in the geographical membership structure of the NCNW.

The funding sources for the National Council of Negro Women have not changed substantially within the past four years. Its funds come primarily from membership dues, and corporate, foundations and government grants for specific programmes.

The National Council of Negro Women has an affiliation with the Ghana Association of Women Entrepreneurs (GAWE). In 1996, the International Division of NCNW worked closely with that Association to stage the first Global Entrepreneur Trade and Investment Forum to broaden entrepreneurial and investment opportunities for women in Ghana. The Forum was funded by UNDP to bring together African and African-American women entrepreneurs for the first time in an effort to increase trade and investment opportunities for women in America and Africa.

Participation in the Economic and Social Council and its subsidiary bodies and/or conferences and other United Nations meetings

The NCNW United Nations representative began convening forums to prepare for the Fourth World Conference for Women as early as 1994. The organization held a series of six meetings with its community-based sections, with representatives of its 32 national affiliates and with representatives from its 50 collaborative organizations to familiarize them with the goals and purpose of the Conference. The NCNW United Nations representative hosted a preparatory conference in conjunction with the Congressional Black Caucus National Forum to familiarize Caucus members with the goals and objectives of the Conference and to stress the importance of the United Nations. The President and CEO of NCNW served as adviser to the United States delegation. At the forty-seventh NCNW national convention, NCNW United Nations representatives conducted a briefing called "Beijing Platform for Action" to share information concerning the accomplishments of the Conference. The briefing was designed to give participants a better understanding of the Conference and the work of the United Nations. It also served as a guide for NCNW's local community-based sections, affiliates and collaborative organizations in monitoring the outcomes of the Conference, and as a means to encourage community programmes to help eliminate violence and other discriminatory practices against women at local and regional levels. The NCNW United Nations representative remains active in post-Beijing monitoring activities, which include attending public forums hosted by the White House Council on Women, in Washington, D.C., as well as attending State reporting sessions at the United Nations in New York. In addition, the NCNW United Nations representative held workshops in Los Angeles, New Haven and in Boston. They served to reaffirm an international interest among NCNW members and to create and improve understanding of the work of the United Nations. NCNW works in cooperation with other non-governmental organizations to press for the United States ratification of the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW), as set forth at the Beijing Conference. In March of 1996, the NCNW United Nations representative, in cooperation with the NCNW International Division, organized a Women's Day celebration to mark the United Nations International Women's Day. The event served to commemorate the leadership of African-American women and generate an interest in supporting international development programmes. In December 1996, the NCNW United Nations representative held a briefing at the NCNW Affiliates Assembly to brief the group about the Beijing Conference and share information about the United Nations and the programmes of the NCNW International Division in Africa and Egypt. In addition, the NCNW United Nations representatives participated in the United Nations Association meetings in New York and in Washington, D.C. and also served on the Board of Directors. The United Nations representative also attended United Nations Department of Public Information briefings and meetings of the United Nations Association and the Committee on Ageing.

9. National Wildlife Federation

(Special consultative status granted in 1991)

The mission of the National Wildlife Federation (NWF) is to educate, inspire and assist individuals and organizations of diverse cultures to conserve wildlife and other natural resources and to protect the earth's environment in order to achieve a peaceful, equitable and sustainable future.

The National Wildlife Federation is the largest conservation education organization in the United States, with 4.5 million members and supporters located throughout the United States, but with additional individual members and supporters in 175 other countries. Through research, publications, litigation, volunteer training and public education, the National Wildlife Federation seeks to prepare for the environmental challenges of the coming century. Through its international programmes NWF maintains a dialogue with non-governmental organizations, government agencies, multilateral bodies and concerned individuals worldwide on the key topics of environmental protection and sustainable development. The National Wildlife Federation is a non-governmental, non-profit, tax-exempt conservation organization operating under the laws of the United States.

There have been no substantial changes since the last report in geographical membership, sources of funding or affiliation to international non-governmental organizations in consultative status.

Participation in the Economic and Social Council and its subsidiary bodies, conferences and meetings

1995. NWF mobilized activists nationwide to write over 4,000 letters and make hundreds of phone calls to the United States Congress in favour of appropriating funds for United Nations activities in sustainable development, including UNFPA, UNEP, UNDP and others. NWF held a major conference, Accounting for the Environment, aimed at promoting the methodology of natural resources accounting, for Governments and the Bretton Woods institutions. Staff of the United Nations Statistical Division participated.

NWF's Director of International Programs led the organization's delegation to the third session of the Commission on Sustainable Development, and the inter-sessional meeting, making a number of oral statements on behalf of non-governmental organizations in the informal meetings and at press events arranged by the United Nations Department of Public Information. NWF also participated in the NGO Steering Committee for the Commission.

In 1995 NWF presented its highest award, the Conservation Achievement Award, to Dr. Nafis Sadik, Executive Director of the United Nations Population Fund.

1996. During the inter-sessional meeting of the Commission on Sustainable Development, the National Wildlife Federation convened two evening panel discussions on new financial resources and mechanisms for funding sustainable development. The first featured the Chairman of the Commission. United Nations officials, representatives of non-governmental organizations and of the Government of the Netherlands; the second featured the ambassadors from Thailand and Guyana, officials of the United Nations and independent experts. Several representatives of the National Wildlife Federation attended the fourth session of the Commission. NWF's Director of International Programs presented a paper on the future of the Commission, as an NGO panellist (along with the Chairmen of the first three sessions of the Commission) during the high-level segment. This was in preparation for the fifth session and the special session of the General Assembly to be held the following year.

Also during the fourth session of the Commission, NWF's Population and Environment

Program Coordinator arranged for a well-attended NGO briefing on alternative waste management technologies that benefit women and children.

The Director of NWF's International Programs participated in the second International UNEP Meeting on Finance and the Environment, held in London.

1997. NWF's Director of International Programs participated in the Fourth Expert Meeting on Financing for Agenda 21, in Santiago, Chile. The Director also contributed a chapter called "Financial resources for the transition to sustainable development" to the book The Way Forward: Beyond Agenda 21 (Earthscan, 1997) which promoted public understanding of the progress and promise of the Commission and the five years since the Rio Earth Summit (United Nations Conference on Environment and Development).

During the fifth session of the Commission, working with many governmental and non-governmental delegations, NWF promoted a proposal for the establishment of a special intergovernmental panel on finance to break the impasse between countries of the North and South which was impeding implementation of Agenda 21. This proposal was taken up in debate during the special session of the General Assembly, and the NWF International Director worked with governmental delegations to further the proposal, though in the end it was not adopted.

The National Wildlife Federation sent delegations to both the special session and to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change.

NWF's International Programs Director was a plenary speaker at the third international UNEP Meeting on Finance and the Environment, held in New York.

1998. The National Wildlife Federation developed a programme on climate change and wildlife, specifically designed to build a constituency in the United States for the ratification of the Kyoto Protocol to the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change.

The Coordinator of NWF's Program on Finance and the Environment participated in the fourth UNEP meeting on Finance and the Environment, held in Cambridge, United Kingdom. Prior to the UNEP meeting, NWF organized the first NGO World Bank round table, bringing together leading international financial institutions and non-governmental organizations to discuss environmental issues and to identify areas of common interest.

Throughout the quadrennium, NWF lobbied the United States Congress in favour of expanded United States participation in the United Nations; for high levels of voluntary contributions to the special agencies of the United Nations system which have a bearing on population, the environment and sustainable development; for full United States funding to fulfil the commitments made at the International Conference on Population and Development; and for payment of United States arrears to the United Nations.
