Africa

Sudan and South Sudan

The Security Council issued a press statement on 1 July that noted with alarm the increased conflict in Wau, South Sudan, and called on all armed parties to cease hostilities. There was a meeting on 7 July of troop-contributing countries for UNMISS. The Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations, Hervé Ladsous, conducted a briefing. A press statement was issued on 9 July that condemned the fighting in Juba and the separate attacks on United Nations and diplomatic officials that had occurred in Juba on 7 July.

On 10 July, informal consultations of the whole were held. The Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations briefed the Security Council on his views on the background and developments surrounding the incidents, as well as on the status of the severe restrictions imposed on UNMISS movement in Juba. Council members strongly condemned the clashes and demanded an immediate end to the violence by all concerned, as well as control and discipline over military forces. The Council also discussed the regional force being considered by the Intergovernmental Authority on Development (IGAD) as well as methods for fortifying UNMISS. The Council issued a press statement after the meeting.

The Security Council met again on 13 July for a briefing on South Sudan from the Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations. He described large-scale displacement, civilian deaths and violations of United Nations protection of civilian sites. He insisted that UNMISS and humanitarian actors be allowed free movement and access. He also noted an IGAD communiqué calling for a troop increase and the creation of an intervention brigade, which had also been endorsed by the Peace and Security Council of the African Union. The Under-Secretary-General concluded by urging the Council to consider an arms embargo in the light of deliberate attempts to derail the peace agreement of August 2015, and recommended a one-month technical rollover of the UNMISS mandate. During informal consultations, Council members and the Under-Secretary-General were joined for interactive discussions by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General and Head of UNMISS, Ellen Margrethe Løj, who participated from Juba by way of videoconference. Discussions focused on the possibility of intensifying violence, the command and control of the Sudan People's Liberation Army, the need for political pressure and political dialogue, approaches for fortifying UNMISS and the imposition of an arms embargo and targeted sanctions.

On 29 July, the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 2302 (2016) to authorize a technical rollover of the mandate of UNMISS until 12 August.

Somalia

On 7 July, the Security Council unanimously adopted resolution 2297 (2016), which extended the authorization of the African Union Mission in Somalia until 31 May 2017. China, Egypt and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland made statements after the vote.

Somalia and Eritrea

The Security Council held consultations of the whole on 20 July to discuss the Security Council Committee pursuant to resolutions 751 (1992) and 1907 (2009) concerning Somalia and Eritrea. The Deputy Secretary-General, Jan Eliasson, briefed the Security Council, stressing his concern with regard to the increase in political tensions due to electoral delays. He also expressed concern about recent attacks on civilians in the eastern Democratic Republic of the Congo. He said he was encouraged, though, by the resumption of cooperation between the Forces armées de la République démocratique du Congo (FARDC) and the United Nations Organization Stabilization Mission in the Democratic Republic of the Congo in the eastern Democratic Republic of the Congo. The Democratic Republic of the Congo also took the floor under rule 37 of the provisional rules of procedure of the Council. Active discussion by Council members about the situation was conducted in the consultations of the whole.

On the basis of the above consultations, the Security Council issued a press statement on 15 July that stressed the crucial importance of a peaceful and credible electoral cycle, in accordance with the country's Constitution, for stability, development and the consolidation of constitutional democracy in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. The Council, among other things, also underscored the urgent need to convene an open, inclusive and peaceful political dialogue among all stakeholders focused on the holding of elections, and expressed support for the decision taken by the African Union to undertake consultations on that dialogue.

The Permanent Representative of Ukraine to the United Nations also briefed the Council in his capacity as Chair of the Security Council Committee established pursuant to resolution 2127 (2013) concerning the Central African Republic about his visit to the country from 24 to 27 May. The Central African Republic participated in the meeting under rule 37 of the provisional rules of procedure, but did not make a statement.

The Security Council adopted resolution 2301 (2016) unanimously on 26 July, extending the Mission's mandate until 15 November 2017. The Central African Republic and France made statements after the adoption of the resolution.

United Nations Office for West Africa and the Sahel

The Security Council had a briefing and consultations of the whole on 11 July. The Special Representative of the Secretary-General and Head of the United Nations Office for West Africa and the Sahel (UNOWAS), Mohamed Ibn Chambas, briefed the Council and presented the first report of the newly combined UNOWAS office. As instability and terrorist networks were continuing to fuel extremism in the region, he urged the further strengthening of the Multinational Joint Task Force and increased efforts to meet the basic needs of civilians. In the consultations that followed, the merger of the Offices and the hope for increased synergies were discussed. Council members expressed concern about the various political tensions and cross-cutting threats to peace in the region, and in particular the humanitarian impact of Boko Haram.

Following those discussions, on 28 July the Security Council adopted a presidential statement (S/PRST/2016/11), which welcomed the earlier briefing by the Special Representative, the report of the Secretary-General on the activities of UNOWAS (S/2016/566) and the merger of the Office of the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General for the Sahel and the United Nations Office for West Africa, and reiterated the Council's continued support. On 27 July, the Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs, Jeffrey Feltman, and the Under-Secretary-General for Humanitarian Affairs and Emergency Relief Coordinator, Stephen O'Brien, briefed the members of the Security Council on the ongoing challenges faced by West Africa in combating Boko Haram. The Under-Secretary-General for Political Affairs underscored the need for more funding for the Multinational Joint Task Force so that it would be able to maintain the gains it had made. He cited high youth unemployment as a reason for terrorist groups' successful recruitment. The Under-Secretary-General for Humanitarian Affairs warned that the humanitarian situation was difficult in the region as a result of violence, environmental degradation and extreme poverty. As an extreme example of the situation, he pointed out that, in the far northern region of Cameroon, the number of people needing immediate food aid had quadrupled to more than 200,000 since June 2015.

All members of the Security Council took the floor. They were united in their concern for the desperate humanitarian situation and cited poverty, terrorism, organized crime and climate change among the challenges facing the region. Some members emphasized the need to maintain protection for human rights while combating terrorist groups. Members welcomed the progress of the Multinational Joint Task Force.

Peacebuilding in Africa

On 28 July, Japan convened an open debate at the ministerial level on peacebuilding in Africa, chaired by the Minister for Foreign Affairs of Japan, Fumio Kishida. The debate was based on a concept paper distributed by Japan (see S/2016/586, annex).

The Secretary-General made an opening remark. While noting the continued existence of conflicts on the continent, he stressed that such conflicts were not the whole picture, referring to improvements made in economies and living standards and the expansion of democratic space. He advised the international community to help both countries in need and developing countries, and that one way to do that was to invest in institution-building. The Secretary-General underscored several lessons learned with regard to institution-building during the past years, including that there was no one size-fits-all solution, that a solution should be rooted in political agreement and that the international community must understand that institution-building was a long-term process. The Secretary-General also stated that this last point was particularly important for the Security Council when it was designing mandates. In addition, the Secretary-General stressed that the Peacebuilding Commission provided an important platform to help focus the attention of relevant actors on long-term institution-building, to share lessons learned and to sustain the engagement of the international community. The Cabinet Secretary for Foreign Affairs and International Trade of Kenya, Amina Chawahir Mohamed, and the Commissioner for Peace and Security of the African Union, Smail Chergui, also made statements.

In addition to the members of the Security Council, 32 speakers participated. Many participants mentioned the need for predictable financing support for African initiatives. Member States highlighted their own initiatives on the continent, which demonstrated the serious attention given to the issue. On the same occasion, the Council adopted a presidential statement (S/PRST/2016/12) reaffirming the importance of the topic. It emphasized the fact that peacebuilding was an inherently political process. It also noted the important role the African Union and national strategies had in peacebuilding. It stressed that there should be long-term development strategies and efforts to address the root causes of conflicts.

Burundi

On 29 July, the Security Council adopted resolution 2303 (2016) by 11 votes to none, with 4 abstentions. The resolution requested the Secretary-General to establish a United Nations police component in Burundi for an initial period of one year to monitor the security situation and to support the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights in monitoring human rights violations and abuses, and to strengthen the Office of the Special Adviser to the Secretary-General on conflict prevention, including in Burundi. The resolution also requested the Secretary-General to report to the Council, in close coordination with the African Union, on proposals to enable the United Nations to facilitate the deployment of African Union observers, and to report on modalities for cooperation between the United Nations police component and the African Union observers. All members spoke after the vote.

Council members discussed the positive work of UNIFIL in the fragile situation facing Lebanon, in particular with regard to the state of terrorism and the issue of refugees in the country.

On 22 July, the Security Council adopted a presidential statement (S/PRST/2016/10) expressing its deep concern with regard to the continued vacancy of the office of the presidency. The presidential statement underlined that the vacancy and the resulting political paralysis hurt the ability of Lebanon to handle growing security, economic, social and humanitarian challenges. The statement also stressed that stability of Lebanon was important to the stability of the region as a whole.

The situation in the Middle East, including the Palestinian question

The report of the Middle East Quartet,<sup>1</sup> which was released on 1 July, was actively discussed by the members of the Security Council at the consultations of the whole on 11 July under the item entitled “Other matters”.

The quarterly open debate was held on 12 July. The Secretary-General highlighted the 10 recommendations of the Quartet report. He warned that time was running out, underscoring that, as negative trends grew more frequent, the prospects for a two-State solution grew more distant. Stressing that the failure of Israeli and Palestinian leaders to advance peace had created a vacuum which extremist voices had filled, he stated that recent incidents of violence had reinforced the mounting risks. The Secretary-General, referring to recent developments in settlement construction and expansion, emphasized that such settlements were in flagrant disregard of international law. The Secretary-General urged practical action from the parties, regional actors and the international community to secure peace in the Middle East. Speakers called for an immediate end to violence from both sides and new strategies to create peace. Many speakers also underscored the illegal nature of Israeli settlements.

Under rule 37 of the provisional rules of procedure of the Security Council, 23 Member States, including Israel, took the floor. Under rule 39 of the provisional rules of procedure, the Delegation of the European Union to the United Nations and a representative of the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People participated in the open debate. He urged the Council to increase pressure on the parties involved to ensure that the United Nations received adequate protection and access. He also called for an end to all sieges. All members took the floor in the chamber following the Under-Secretary-General’s briefing. While all members expressed concern about the humanitarian situation, there were differences in opinion as to how it should be addressed. In the consultations of the whole that followed, the Council discussed some of the issues raised by the Under-Secretary-General, including his suggestion of a weekly 48-hour pause to allow humanitarian access by United Nations agencies.

Iraq

On 5 July, the Security Council issued a press statement condemning terrorist attacks in Baghdad. He informed the Council that Iraq had significant humanitarian needs and discussed ways in which the underfunded humanitarian appeal had a direct impact on the ground. He also urged Iraqi political and community leaders to prioritize reconciliation efforts.

Through the unanimous adoption of resolution 2299 (2016) on 25 July, the Security Council extended the mandate of UNAMI. Egypt made a brief statement after the adoption. On 29 July, a press statement on Iraq and Kuwait was issued.

Afghanistan

Working methods

In response to the decision by the General Assembly, in its resolution 68/307, to conduct the elections of the non-permanent members of the Security Council about six months before the elected members assumed their responsibilities, the Council adopted a presidential note dated 15 July (S/2016/619). A product of intensive work on the part of the Council's Informal Working Group on Documentation and Other Procedural Questions over several months, the note outlined measures to facilitate the preparations of newly elected members as well as to improve the selection process and preparations of the Chairs of subsidiary organs. In accordance with the note, the Council now invites the newly elected members of the Council to observe all meetings of the Council and its subsidiary organs and the informal consultations of the whole for a period of three months, as from 1 October immediately preceding their terms of membership, except in cases otherwise provided for in the same note. In addition, the note stated that the members of the Council should make every effort to agree provisionally on the appointment of the Chairs of the subsidiary organs for the following year no later than 1 October, with the informal process of consultations on the appointment of the Chairs of the subsidiary organs to be facilitated jointly by two members of the Council working in full cooperation.

On 19 July, on the day of the tenth anniversary of the adoption of the first presidential note on the working methods of the Council (S/2006/507), the Council convened an open debate on its working methods under the item entitled "Implementation of the note by the President of the Security Council (S/2010/507)". The debate was based on a concept paper distributed by Japan (see S/2016/585, annex), in which it proposed that the Council, with the participation of interested delegations from the wider membership, look at the implementation of the presidential note dated 26 July 2010 (S/2010/507) and other relevant notes to identify successful practices as well as possible shortcomings, and consider making necessary adjustments. Many delegations stressed the importance of the Council's continuous efforts to improve its transparency while ensuring its ability to act effectively and efficiently. While welcoming the improvements made in recent years, including the recent adoption of the note dated 15 July 2016, many delegations called for fuller and more even implementation of the presidential notes, and looked forward to the review and updating of the note dated 26 July 2010, including with a focus on implementation, as requested in the presidential statement dated 30 October 2015 (S/PRST/2015/19).
